WEATHER KEY POINTS

08/06/21 - 08/12/21

Friday

- Somewhat cooler but still hot temperatures will be noted across much of interior southern California this afternoon, with low to moderate heat risk impacts
  - Daytime high temperatures of 100 to 115 degrees are expected

Saturday-Thursday

- Generally low to moderate heat risk impacts will persist across the San Joaquin Valley and interior southern California through the weekend and early next week, expanding back north as another period of hotter weather returns by the middle and end of next week
- Fire weather conditions will become elevated once again by Saturday as locally gusty winds develop in and around the foothills and mountains. Those same conditions will persist each afternoon through the middle of next week, though widespread strong winds are not expected.
- A few monsoon showers and thunderstorms could return to parts of southern California by the early to middle portions of the week, though at this time, coverage of any rainfall looks quite low at this time
